The purpose of this lecture is to provide a complex analysis political and social phenomenon of rescuing the Hebrews in Albania during WWII. As a historical course delivered to non-historians, the purpose of this course is triple. First and foremost, to enable students build skills that a historian applies when writing about holocaust; these skills are also utilized in our daily lives and are therefore integral to the critical thinking process. Secondly, to empower student understanding that our world today obliges to reconstruct the collective memory about Holocaust and rescuing of Hebrews during WWII as a moral choice and responsibility of our societies. Last, the lecture aims at enhancing student understanding and appreciation of the historical fact about Holocaust and rescuing of the Hebrews during WWII in Albania.
