Standing women on rolling boarders

During this workshop, students will embark on a transformative journey through the lives of three young women who resided in the border areas of Croatia, Slovenia, and Italy before and during the Second World War. By immersing themselves in the rich tapestry of these women's experiences, students will uncover profound insights into the intricate web of political and social relations that shaped the region and profoundly impacted individuals, minorities, and ethnic communities.

By actively participating in these immersive activities, students will not only deepen their comprehension of the historical backdrop of the border regions but also cultivate essential critical thinking skills and a nuanced appreciation for the complexities of identity formation in diverse socio-historical contexts.
