

Workshop summary :

Same event - different stories. Multidirectional Memory in Holocaust education

The workshop invites to explore the differences between memory and history. Participants become aware of the fact that history and memory are two opposing concepts and that also the way the Holocaust is narrated often serves the current needs of a nation, a community and its self-images. Different communities narrate history in different ways and is always important to consider the entanglements created by that.

Tanja Lenuweit